Program Mission

The Department of Political Science endeavors to develop in its graduates an understanding of how political systems operate as well as with what consequences, and with what alternatives these systems contend. The primary focus is on inculcating analytical and critical habits of thinking habits that will be beneficial to society irrespective of professional choices. The Department is oriented toward assisting students who are preparing to go to graduate school, law school or for careers in the public sector and non-profit service. In the process, we hope to create a body of students and citizens who are informed, who have the intellectual skills, and who are also cognizant of humanistic values. The Department, in line with the values of the social sciences, seeks to engender a student body that is aware of the social and political structure within which we live — thus fulfilling the University's mission and goals for the general education of our undergraduate students.

Program Requirements

All majors must satisfactorily complete at least twelve courses in Political Science, of which at least nine must be at the upper division level. Required lower and upper division courses for majors must be completed with a grade of "C-" or better. Students who fail to achieve a "C-" above may repeat the course. The Department encourages students to develop their degree plans in close consultation with their faculty advisor.

This course of study is designed to facilitate learning the basic concepts, theories, and methods of study of relations between individuals, groups, and systems that determine the social and economic opportunities and outcomes for individuals. This includes focusing on the roles played in these relations by U.S. national, regional, State, and local institutions.

This course of study is designed to facilitate learning the basic concepts, theories, and methods of study of complex relations between domestic politics in the U.S. and other nations and the interactions beyond national borders. Although the nation-state remains a primary actor in these relationships, students will also study many non-state actors, including “interest groups” such as business and industry sectors, non-governmental organizations advocating for change, and para-military terrorist and anti-state actors.

This course of study is designed to facilitate learning the basic concepts, theories, and methods of institutions and behaviors of American government and to train students in research, analytical, and communication skills that focus on the uses of American Government and policy.

Any upper division Political Science courses, whether taken at CSUB or transferred in, will count toward this requirement, except for lower division activity courses.

Range depends on double counting.

May be satisfied in major or other university requirement.
